ESNS 4th Annual Conference Postponed

The unfolding coronavirus (COVID-19) crisis has significantly affected the meetings and conference industry. As destinations work to contain the spread of the virus, many countries, states and cities have banned large events and international travels are still conditioned by restrictions and limitation throughout continents.

Even though the situation may have normalized by November this year, hopefully in many regions, others may still be affected. As an international society, we need our Annual Conference to be open to our members and colleague wherever they are located, but at this point it is not possible to predict whether we will still have travel bans and whether borders will be closed somewhere in the world. Your Safety is our Priority!

It is therefore, with regret that we need to inform you that ESNS Board of Directors (BOD) After careful consideration, and very detailed discussions, has made the difficult but appropriate decision to postpone the ESNS Annual Conference which was to be held in Oslo from 27th to 29th November to next year, always in Oslo, keeping intact our scientific programme and speakers line up.

ESNS Board is already working to create a virtual 1day event that will be held SATURDAY 28th November so that our members and affiliated will still have the chance to interact and get updated on the latest research on sport nutrition.

We would like to thank you all for your cooperation and understanding during these trying times. Despite this difficult situation, we appreciate your support and We very much hope that you will still join us in 2021.

We are very much looking forward to welcoming you to Oslo from 26th to 28th November 2021.

SAVE THE NEW DATE!

On behalf of the ESNS Board of Directors,

Prof. Antonio Paoli
ESNS President

Prof. Truls Raastad
ESNS Vice President
